A war which might not otherwise have been inevitable. Before WW2 FDR sought improved relations with the Vozhd. The question was always who would strike first. Stalin was cut from a different cloth. Lenin's successor got his wish. Neither Britain nor France however declared war on the USSR. It was not to be. That changed the calculus. Stalin's ambitions were global. McMeekin describes Churchill and FDR as intoxicated with Stalin. Roosevelt's intoxication was acute. After Pearl Harbor the US declared war on Japan. McMeekin draws back the curtain on FDR the war leader. Anglo American aid to Stalin was never conditioned on behavior. Hitler lost WW2. However he didn't have to win. FDR however rejected all peace entreaties. Allied and Axis soldiers and civilians died needlessly. Roosevelt seemed to give it nary a thought. Churchill saw Britain as dependent on FDR and Stalin. Even after VE Day accommodating Stalin continued. The first myth is that Stalin wasn't an aggressive dictator
